The Parnassian Ensemble

…excellently played recital… alluringly sweet-toned.
The Sunday Times

Since its formation in 1998, The Parnassian Ensemble has gained a reputation for its virtuosic performances and innovative programming. It regularly appears at prestigious venues throughout the UK such as The Purcell Room; St John's, Smith Square; St David's Hall, Cardiff and The Fairfield Hall, Croydon. The ensemble also performs for festivals, music societies and museums as well as schools and universities.

The group's concert schedule has included appearances at the Victoria and Albert Museum; the National Portrait Gallery; the Cobbe Collection of historical keyboard instruments, Hatchlands, Surrey; the Newbury Spring Festival; the Djanogly Recital Hall, Nottingham; the Firth Hall, University of Sheffield and the Totnes Early Music Society, Devon.

An unusual feature of its recitals is the introduction to audiences of fine, original, early eighteenth-century English recorder music which would otherwise remain virtually unknown. It was this enthusiasm that led to the recording of their critically acclaimed first disc, A Noble Entertainment – Music from Queen Anne's London 1702-1714 (AV2094) released on the Avie Records label and which is now regularly broadcast on BBC Radio 3, Classic FM and world-wide.

It is also developing an exciting project to commission new works by living composers.

Recently, the ensemble travelled to teach at the Grieg Academy in Bergen, Norway, where they gave early music classes, coaching sessions and individual tuition to Norwegian and international students. A highlight was appearing in a harbour-side former wine warehouse, an extremely rare all-wooden building from the 16th century, as part of the Antikk Musikk concerts series.

Since then, the group has appeared at the Benslow Music concerts series in Hertfordshire to perform in the European Early Music Day celebrations and has given several sell-out recitals in the Festival of Chichester as well as performing in the Lancing College Recital Series. Recent concerts have included recitals at St Mary's Church in Liss, Hampshire, for the Spirit of Music Festival; Boxgrove Priory and at Chichester Cathedral, as well as several concerts at Holy Trinity Church, Bosham.
